Postlude

Any refuge other than God is probably something that I should seek refuge from rather than seek refuge in.

Craig D. Lounsbrough

I am slowly, painfully discovering that my refuge is not found in my mother, my grandmother, or even the birds ... My refuge exists in my capacity to love. If I can learn to love death then I can begin to find refuge in change.

Terry Tempest Williams

Don't let the rain drive you to the wrong shelter; the shade can turn out to be your protector and also your destroyer, and sometimes the rain is the perfect protector from the rain.

Michael Bassey Johnson

Most people have forgotten nowadays what a house can mean, though some of us have come to realize it as never before. It is a kingdom of its own in the midst of the world, a stronghold amid life's storms and stresses, a refuge, even a sanctuary.

REFUGE

I’ll tell you this:
I am the only part of winter left.
It beckoned and I followed,
past all reason,
followed it like the end of a broken train
through white woods,
and I stayed, with simple tools,
set on trying to construct more of a season.
It has taken all of me to do it,
and you would not believe the storms.
You would not believe how I sleep.
From here anything
would sound like a cry.
Everything looks like pieces of God.
